FOREWORD

It is the same with exhibitions as with all things in the world — either they improve or they go backward. They cannot remain static, or they stop growing, stagnate, die.

What applies to exhibitions as a whole applies also to individual artists, and even to the public. I think the role the public plays in an exhibition like the Winnipeg Show is at least as active as the artist's role.

Artists can succeed or fail; so can a public. How terrible if the public fails to understand what is offered to it — if it fails to recognize its artists! Certainly the public has failed many times. This fact, however, should not lead us to believe that only those artists who were not understood were the great ones. There were many times when the public knew exactly to whom to give its approval. But we are not living in such fortunate times. There are too many problems around us for us to recognize immediately what is good and what is not good in art. That is probably why so many errors have been made in the recognition of art within the last hundred years.

In any case, the public now has the opportunity to make its choice at the Third Winnipeg Show since everyone attending the Show may cast a ballot for what, in his or her estimation, is the best picture in the Show. Let us hope that the People's Choice will be a thoughtful one.

Ferdinand Eckhardt,
